Supporting indigenous service providers and survivors of crime in Washington State

This project was supported through the VOCA by and for Grant Award Number 1913-67365 by the Washington State Department of Commerce, Office for Victims of Crime Assistance, through Washington State Department of Social and Health Services. The opinions, findings, conclusions, and recommendations expressed in this publication are those of the author(s) and do not necessarily reflect the views of WA DOC, OVCA or Washington State DSHS.

Serving Victims of Crime

Indigenous populations face higher rates of crime victimization than any other minority group in the country (Department of Justice). In order to address this growing epidemic, services are now being offered for victims and survivors through the Indigenous Crime Victims Services Referral and Resource Center.

ICVSRRC is committed to providing victims and survivors with services and assistance that will help them deal with the aftermath of a criminal act and that aids in the restoration of the whole person. ICVSRRC grounds its methods and values in indigenous teachings and works to help indigenous victims move through the criminal justice system and healing process with the support and resources necessary for a successful life.

Supporting Service Providers

ICVSRRC provides support to tribal and urban service providers in provision of services to Indigenous Victims of crimes related to domestic violence, sexual assault, stalking, strangulation, sex-trafficking, dating violence, homicide, identity theft, cybercrime and other crimes in Washington State.

- Education and outreach to increase awareness regarding the unique circumstances of indigenous crime victims
- Case collaboration and management
- Coordination and networking between agencies to provide holistic, wrap around services for indigenous populations
- Advocating on behalf of victims obtaining needed services and resources
- Assisting tribal communities and urban service providers in planning, developing and networking/collaborating services for Indigenous Victims
- Collaborating and to serve as a liaison with local and state government agencies in providing tribal specific guidance and consultation that impact policies and services for Indigenous victims
